Bronx Urban Farms Trolley Tours 2013

May 11
City of Immigrants

Our first tour of the season will feature the horticultural and culinary delights of the Bronx's diverse immigrant population. Participants will visit La Finca del Sur Urban Farm, a women-led, non-profit farm and community resource for food, family, gardening, and fun. We will have lunch at Drew Gardens, a community garden nestled along the Bronx River. The group will tour the grounds, where more than 40 families grow food in community plots. Finally, we will visit Little Green/Rock Garden and Melrose New Generation Garden, enjoying local entertainment among the plants and people.

June 8
Caribbean Culture

Join in the festivities of NYC's annual Puerto Rican Day Parade. First, participants will do some gardening, helping out the folks at Roberto Clemente Community Garden, which has vegetables, fruit trees, and beauty, permanently protected by The Bronx Land Trust. Next, we will see folks build a float for the parade, right in their own community, at El Flamboy-an Community Garden in the South Bronx. Finally, participants will hear the drum sounds coming from the Casita, live at Rincon Criollo Cultural Center and Community Garden with Jose Chema Soto.

Lunch is included.

July 13
African-American Culture

This tour will feature the rich food and cultural landscape of the Bronx's African Americans. Our first stop is Padre Plaza Success Community Garden, where gardeners grow food, cook healthy, and sell produce at their seasonal farmers market. Next stop, Taqwa Community Farm, an urban farm with chickens, bees, gardeners, and plants for food and medicine. Participants will round off the day at River Garden. Walk among the oversized vegetable plots and smell the flowers on a hot summer's day. We will feature a gardening mini-workshop in the cool shade of the rainwater harvesting roof and shed.

The Youth Tour

Ray Figueroa and youth gardeners from Brook Park will take us on a tour of the Bronx, as seen through the eyes of our next generation. Participants will dig right in and garden at New York Restoration Project's Target Bronx Community Garden. We will visit the Children's Garden at Bartow-Pell Mansion Museum, a National Landmark located in Pelham Bay Park. At the year-old Children's Garden, they use historically based methods like composting and companion planting. Our final stop is Brook Park, where youth and families garden and a wealth of arts and indigenous cultural events take place.

September 7
Italian Culinary Tour

Our Culinary Tour of the Bronx will begin at the Ruth Rea Howell Family Garden at The New York Botanical Garden, where longtime volunteer and Bronxite Frank Russo will guide us through the Global Gardens, and vegetable plots with cultural themes. You may be able to spy a bunny or scarecrow amid edible gardens tended by visiting children! Next up, historic Arthur Avenue, an Italian culinary gem, where participants will visit the market to learn about cheese-making at Mike's Deli. Finally, participants will drop in on the Annual Bronx Green-Up and GreenThumb Harvest Festival for community gardeners citywide. You'll have the opportunity to mingle with gardeners from all over the city and visit a community garden in all its harvest glory.

Healthy Community

Our fall tour will feature all things wellness: get outside, eat well, and exercise! First, participants will visit the Garden of Happiness, where chickens roam among a plethora of Mexican herbs and garden vegetables, all which contribute to a community-run market. Participants will do some Zumba to energize them for the day. Then, we will have lunch at Tremont Community Garden, a Bronx Land Trust (BLT) garden where seniors grow food. Our last stop will be Jacqueline Denise Davis (JDD) Garden, which features a rainwater harvesting roof that provides shade and water to gardeners, courtesy of GrowNYC, who also use the space for their Learn It, Grow It, Eat It youth program.
